Q.No: 86	In the given passage, some words have been deleted. Read the passage intently and choose the most appropriate option to fill in each blank: The archive, far from a passive container of memory, functions as an apparatus of epistemic engineering—structuring the legibility of the past through regimes of visibility and institutional (1) _____. It performs not merely as custodian, but as an authorial surrogate, retrofitting historical fragments into a narratological grammar that flatters the contours of state teleology. What escapes its rubric is not lost, but rendered (2) _____—denied syntactic viability within the lexicon of national legitimacy. This architecture does not conceal so much as calibrate. Through procedural neutrality, the archive creates the illusion of factual autonomy, even as its categories enforce ontological obedience. Items included are not only preserved but (3) _____, endowed with rhetorical inertia that naturalizes their interpretive authority. What remains uncatalogued is condemned to historiographic latency—neither denied nor debated, but suspended in bureaucratic limbo. Hence, archiving becomes not an act of recall, but of inscription: it encodes memory into a topology of relevance. In doing so, it (4) _____ affective possibility—dictating not only what can be known, but what may be mourned, commemorated, or forgotten. To critique this system is not to impugn documentation, but to unmask its metaphysical scaffolding: the unseen grammar that adjudicates between datum and debris, artifact and aberration, history and noise.The scholar's task, then, is not simply retrieval, but ontological sabotage: to (5) _____ the archive's predicate assumptions before entering its doors. What should come in the place of blank number (2)?
	anachronistic
	inarticulable
	heretical
	peripheral
