The workforce has become increasingly more diverse and this trend toward diversity will continue. This includes increasing diversity along racial, ethnic and gender lines, as well as an increasing percentage of the workforce that is over age fifty-five. Effectively managing diversity has been identified as one of five distinguishing features of organizations that make it onto Fortune magazine's list of 100 Best Companies. Diversity issues have several implications for HRD professionals. First, organizations need to address racial, ethnic and other prejudices that may persist, as well as cultural insensitivity and language differences. Second, with the increasing numbers of women in the workforce, organizations should continue to provide developmental opportunities that will prepare women for advancement into the senior ranks and provide safeguards against sexual harassment. Third, the ageing of the workforce highlights the importance of creating HRD programs that recognize and address the learning-related needs of both younger and older workers. Diversity can be a catalyst for improved organizational performance - though this is far from a sure thing!

कार्य-बल और अधिक विविध होता जा रहा है और विविधता की ओर यह रुझान जारी रहेगा। इसमें नस्लीय, जातीय और लैंगिक आधार पर बढ़ती विविधता के साथ-साथ पचपन वर्ष से अधिक के कार्य-बल का बढ़ता प्रतिशत भी शामिल है। प्रभावी विविधता प्रबंधन को 'फारच्यून' पत्रिका की सौ सर्वश्रेष्ठ कंपनियों की सूची में पहुँचने वाले संगठनों के पांच विशिष्ट लक्षणों में से एक के रूप में चिह्नित किया गया है। मानव संसाधन विकास पर काम करने वाले पेशेवरों के लिए विविधता से जुड़ी समस्याएँ कई निहितार्थ सामने लाती हैं। प्रथमतः संगठनों को सांस्कृतिक असंवेदनशीलता और भाषाई भिन्नताओं के साथ-साथ नस्लीय, जातीय और अन्य प्रचलित पूर्वाग्रहों पर ध्यान देना पड़ता है। दूसरे, कार्य-बल में महिलाओं की बढ़ती संख्या के कारण संगठनों को ऐसे विकास के अवसर उपलब्ध कराने चाहिए जो महिलाओं को वरिष्ठ पदों तक उन्नति करने के लिए तैयार करें तथा उन्हें लैंगिक प्रताड़ना के विरुद्ध सुरक्षा के उपाय भी उपलब्ध कराये। तीसरे, कार्य-बल की बढ़ती आयु ऐसे मानव संसाधन विकास कार्यक्रम बनाने के महत्व को रेखांकित करती है, जो अपेक्षाकृत युवा और अधिक आयु वाले श्रमिकों, दोनों की अधिगम-संबंधी आवश्यकताओं को पूरा कर सकें। विविधता बेहतर सांगठनिक प्रदर्शन/निष्पादन के लिए एक उत्प्रेरक हो सकती है, हालाँकि यह कहना कि ऐसा होगा ही, दूर की कल्पना होगी।

In West Bengal v. UOI, the Supreme Court projected the traditional view of federalism and characterized the Indian Constitution as not being true to any traditional pattern of federalism. On the other hand, Subba Rao, J. in his bid to bolster the position of the States against the centre, took to the extreme view of competitive and dual federalism which has been long discarded in older federation.

In State of Rajasthan v. UOI, Beg, CJ, said, the extent of federalism in it is largely watered down by the needs of progress and development of a country which has to nationally integrated, politically and economically coordinated and socially, intellectually and spiritually uplifted.

In S. R. Bommai v. UOI, Ahmadi J. described the Indian Constitution following K. C. Wheare as "quasi federal" because it is mixture of the federal and unitary elements, learning more towards the latter, Sawant J. observed "Democracy and federalism are essential features of our Constitution and are part of basic structure".

Justice Reddy, has observed, the fact that under the scheme of our Constitution greater power is conferred upon the centre vis-à-vis the States do not mean that States are mere appendages of the Centre. Within the sphere allotted to them, the State are supreme and the center cannot tamper with their power. More particularly the Court should not adopt an approach, an interpretation, which has the effect of or tends to have effect of whittling down the power reserved to the States.

Federalism in India is not a matter of administrative convince but are of the principle.

Until 2015, if you sang "Happy Birthday to you" to your child, you were a copyright infringer, at least that's what Warner/Chappell Music Inc. would have had you believe. The music publishing company had been charging filmmakers and restaurants for the use of the song in movie scenes and birthday parties for decades. In his situation comedy Sports-Night, writer and producer Aaron Sorkin wrote an entire episode about one of the character getting a fictional television network in big legal trouble for singing "Happy Birthday to you" to another on the air. It turns out that song was in the "Public domain", namely that collection of works and expressions that exist beyond the reach of copyright ownership and thus serve as a cultural "common" for all of humanity to use and reuse. No one had ever checked on the matter before about 2010. People just took Warner/Chappell word that the company owned the copyright to the song. It had been earning up to $2 million per year from royalties on the song. In 2010 law professor Robert Brauneis published the results of an extensive investigation of the copyright status of the song and found that, among other technical problems with copyright claim, the song on copyright expired in 1982. As a result of the research by Brauneis, Warner/Chappell faces a lawsuit in an attempt to recover millions of dollars that people have paid to the company for permission to use the song. In 2015 a U.S. Federal court ruled that the song is in public domain, with the court ruling an important part of our culture has been restored to the commons. (250 words)
